Time and Effort

Most self-build projects involve the commitment of a large number of hours over a long period of time. It is important that anyone starting on a self-build scheme is fully aware of the significant commitment that is required to bring a self-build project to completion.

There are a range of potential options for self-build projects that should be considered. Some of the common approaches are:

- Self-build one-off home : you manage the design and construction process and are physically involved in part or all of the construction of your home;
- Contractor-built one-off home : you manage the design process and appoint a contractor to build the home to your specification;
- Kit home : you select your preferred kit home and possibly establish the foundations. The kit home company then erects the home;
- Independent community collaboration : you work with others to acquire a site to split into plots then organise the design and construction of your own home;
- Supported community self-build group : a social landlord or the Community Self Build Agency helps you build a group of homes together;
- Community self-build : being physically involved in part of all the construction of your home, as part of a wider scheme on the site; and
- Custom-build home : where a house builder offers a serviced building plot and may also provide a design and build service to create the home you want.

On the basis of the time, effort and skills required to build your own home, are you interested in (please tick all that apply):
